"Come Out As An Ally" Campaign
The Queer and Ally Student Assembly (QuASA) is sponsoring a first-ever, extra special Ally Project called, "Come Out As An Ally" for USC’s Coming Out Month in October. This is an ongoing project in which LGBT supportive Allies including students, staff, faculty and Alumni can declare their support for the USC LGBT Community. The goal is to have at least 1,000 USC Allies participate by taking a picture holding a sign saying, “I Am An Ally” and uploading it onto facebook. United We Win Campaign
United We Win is a campaign about the American future. A public awareness, education, and mobilization campaign for the 2010 mid-term elections, United We Win carries one main message: Latino issues are American issues, and American issues are Latino issues. Recalling the inspirational, iconic WWII posters of the 1940s depicting African-American and white soldiers working side by side for America’s future, United We Win 2010 asks young Latino Americans to build a legacy for themselves by uniting and voting their values on November 2nd. United We Win is built on the belief that young voters can demand elected officials, regardless of party, work together to solve our country’s toughest problems: unemployment, immigration, national security, education and the environment.

This election is a pivotal one, in which young people have an opportunity to claim their role as the next Greatest Generation by going to the voting booth. The campaign features: voter registration and education in states that have large Latino populations, such as California, Texas, Arizona, Colorado, and Florida; nationally broadcast video PSAs featuring a diverse cast of both Latino and non-Latino Americans; and nationally broadcast radio PSAs representing rock, rock en español, pop, reggaeton, and other musical genres.

Right now, young Latino voters are feeling squeezed by high unemployment and foreclosure rates on the one hand, and politicians who are scapegoating them with racial profiling laws on the other. And while Latino turnout has increased from the 2002 and 2006 mid-term elections, it has yet to meet the high voter participation rates witnessed during presidential elections. The stakes simply could not be higher for young Latinos, and that’s why we’re implementing United We Win.

Scholarship Binder at El Centro

El Centro Chicano provides students a unique opportunity for further financial assistance and working experience through our Scholarships, Internships, Fellowships, & Research Binder.

This binder contains information regarding scholarships which provide their description, requirements, availability, and deadlines. In addition to this amazing resource for additional financial aid, there are sections regarding internships, fellowships, and research opportunities for our USC students. Please take advantage of this binder when you stop by El Centro Chicano! Just ask one of our student staff members for the “Scholarships, Internships, Fellowships, & Research Binder” and they will gladly let you use this binder of opportunities!

If you have any questions or would like to add any items to the binder that may be beneficial to USC students, please contact Steven Almazan: salmazez@usc.edu

Steven Almazan works at El Centro Chicano as a Special Projects Assistant.
